Children at the White House.

President Roosevelt enjoys the distinction of not only being the youngest Executive we have ever had, but also of taking to the White House the largest family it has ever domiciled. There is a reason for the popular interest in him, and especially in his six hearty children, ranging from the age of 4 to 17. The people are glad at the prospect of having the funereal pall of gloom and tragedy dispelled by merry shouts and laughter, and their hearts go out to those little ones who help to lighten their father's cares of state.-Exchange.

Smallpox Epidemic.

Findlay is having a smallpox epidemic, all because of one woman's belief in the faith cure. A man came home from Oklahoma before the small pox eruptions had left his face, and in the liquor league, by way of retalia few days three children had it. The mother, being a faith curist, would not have a physician, but depended on prayer. Her neighbors met with her to pray, and now there are fifteen well developed cases in the city, and twenty six houses in quarantine. ROWED HONORS.

Confederate Veterans Association REMAINS WITH UNCLE SAM. Wipe Out a Lot of Afterthe-War Colonels.

At a State meeting of the Kentucky Confederate Veterans Association at Louisville, last Saturday, a resolution was passed to reorganize the Association, by dropping the titles of General, Colonel, Major, &c., as designations of The Last Race Won By 30 Secofficers of the Association. The reason given for the change, was, that it confused the minds of the people, and served to detract from the honors honorably won by officers in the war.

The objection is well taken. Such titles, conferred since the war, like brevets and medals of honor, given since the war, detract from the honors von in actual service. Brevets are secured by political influence where they were not won by meritorious service and medals are conferred by Congress, Aten, when they are not deserved, and always make a distinction against thousands of men who were equally deserv

The Grand Army ought to follow the example of the Confederate Veterans Association. It ought to give its officers some other titles, and let the rank won in the war belong to those who won it before Appomattox.

We have always felt that the rank of Colonel conferred on us by reason of being the Commander of a Post was not appropriate, and 'that we would much rather wear the inferior rank won in the army-which we justly won and merited.

there's nothing dearer to the average Kentuckian's heart than to be addressed as "Colonel" or "Majah," but | wild. the justice of the case carried the resolution through by a decided majority. This is an evidence that something good can come out of Kentucky. .

Extension Work of Bearea College In Southern Mountains.

Berea College is using the period of good roads this fall for "extension work" among the mountain people. A large number of teachers' institutes have been conducted the past summer. This fall four parties in wagons will traverse the remote counties, holding a "three days' meeting" in a place, with stereoptican, attention to agriculture, domestic science, good citizenship, and the building up of the public schools. Through the generosity of author and oublishers 1000 copies of Dole's "Young Citizen" will be distributed. These gatherings are an adaption of the Chautauqua idea, and have proved very popular and useful. Some work of the same kind has been done for the color ed people. One of Berea's colored graduates, Prof. F. L. Williams, of Covington, is President of the State Colored Teachers' Association. The extension work includes traveling ibraries, and touches the Virginias and Tennessee as well as the mountain portion of Kentucky.
